Parents and friends of Caragabal Public School,

Rugby Union Day.

The students all enjoyed their day at Grenfell. The students to their books from school and did their school work in the library while they waited for their turn at the rugby. The students who did not receive a poster will get theirs soon. The year 1 and 2s are pictured waiting for their turn on the day.

Council commences the preparation of the 2013/2014 Operational Plan with a workshop this Monday to review the current list of jobs and consider some new ones that have been proposed. This workshop will be followed up by an Extra-ordinary Meeting next Tuesday to prioritise the projects and determine many of the roads programmes.

The outcome of these meetings will be compiled into the draft Operational Plan which will be presented to Council’s May Meeting. The final draft will then be placed on public exhibition for the statutory 28 days before being represented to Council’s June Meeting for possible amendment and adoption after consideration of any submissions from the public.

Local farmer Phil Diprose has spent a bit of time researching the naming of Goode Lane. Phil’s research shows that the actual family name of the early settlers after whom the road was presumably named, was Good, not Goode. If this information is correct, it indicates an error has been made in the gazettal process.

Council resolved to agree to change the name to Goods Lane provided no information to the contrary comes to light during the public exhibition process.

Well, they’ve done it again. The students of The Henry Lawson High School travelled to Young for the local heat of the annual Science and Engineering Challenge and they blitzed them again. This is the fourth year that Grenfell has won the local round, each year with a different group of students.

What does that say for the local High School? The common factor is the teachers – there is little doubt that Brad Robinson and Colleen Gorman should take a bow! Whatever it is they’re doing, I’ll bet there’s a lot of nearby schools trying to find out.

As a lapsed engineer myself, it’s quite satisfying to think that Henry Lawson High School might be churning out a succession of engineers and scientists.

Well done to the teachers and students, and good luck with the next round.

Someone around the town has shown a different type of interest in science and engineering by entering the tip area last weekend and stealing a large quantity of dumped technology equipment. Presumably the culprit is operating a back yard repair business and was looking for cheap parts.

Council would be pleased to hear of anyone who might fit this bill so that the Police can pay them a visit. A person was noticed at the tip immediately prior to the break in and efforts are being made to identify him. Any help would be appreciated.

A delegation of Mayors and General Managers from the Councils of Blayney, Cowra, Harden, Young and Weddin is travelling to Parliament House this week to meet with the Minister for Roads and Ports, the Hon Duncan Gay, who despite his title also has responsibility for the local rail line.

The delegation will be hoping to bring the Minister up to date with the latest discussions with potential rail users and operators, and also hoping the Minister might find a way to expedite a very slow process before the interest that we have is lost.

Here’s hoping!

The Grenfell pool was closed for a day last week when a circulation failure occurred overnight. The problem was quickly corrected and the pool was re-opened the next day.

The pool will close for the season this Sunday. A specialist contractor has been engaged to undertake work on the scum gutters in the next few weeks to help identify the exact location of the troublesome leaks and provide direction for the pending upgrading. This should assist Council to have a proper understanding of the extent of the problems before embarking on a significant expenditure of funds.

With Seniors Week being celebrated next week, the Grenfell Cinema will have a FREE showing of the movie “Calendar Girls” starring Helen Mirren and Julie Walters.

Please be warned that there are only 60 tickets available and the last movie attracted a few more than that. If you’re intending to go, make sure you pick up your free tickets beforehand.

A final reminder that the current exhibition at the Grenfell Art Gallery closes this weekend. The next exhibition features local sculptors Kathleen McCue, Jason McCue and Len Wallace, plus a display of needlework, porcelain dolls and portraits of local identities by a variety of local artists.

Every exhibition is different and every exhibition is interesting. Come along and spend a little time enjoying the work. You never know, you may find yourself looking back.

The March Council Meeting will be held this Thursday with a very full agenda.

As always, the public is invited to attend and observe proceedings as important decisions are made affecting the local community.
